Biographical/Historical note

The initial presence of the Southwest Washington Joint Center for Education (SWJCE) began as the collaboration between Washington State University, Evergreen State College and Clark Community College in 1983. The center held its first classes at Hudson's Bay High School, offering a handful of courses in engineering and computer programming. In order to meet the expectations for further growth in enrollment, SWJCE moved to the Bauer Hall building on the Clark College campus and in 1989 formally established itself as Washington State University Vancouver, a branch of the state's land-grant institution. For nearly seven years WSU Vancouver expanded its academics, faculty and enrollment at Bauer Hall giving an opportunity for residents in Southwest Washington to attend upper division level courses for undergraduate and Master degree programs.

In 1996 WSU Vancouver moved to its permanent location in the area of Salmon Creek. Since then the WSU Vancouver campus has continued to expand and add new academic programs.

Scope and Contents note

Photographs in the collection were accumulated from marketing campaigns over the years since the 1980s. These include both candid and staged photographs of students using campus facilities. Other photographs were collected to document graduation ceremonies and special events. A small number of photographs of faculty, staff and administration are also included in the collection.

Publications in the collection consist of academic programs and commencement programs as well as campus community reports issued between 1992 and 2004. Publications were often collected as samples of public relations communications between the campus and general community. These include the WSU Vancouver MEMO and Notes for Neighbors. Other publications like the Higher Education Access for Southwest Washington were collected to document WSU Vancouver's participation towards higher education in the region.

A number of ephemera is present in the collection. Copies of flyers and brochures for marketing campaigns as well as advertisements for previous events, dedications and memorials are indexed in the collection.

VHS videocassettes of recordings from WSU Vancouver's lecture hall are included in the collection. These tapes consist of guest speakers and forums captured by Vancouver's community television broadcast station CTV-23. Topics include NAFTA, globalization, the endangered salmon and regional geology. A video of Professor Lori Irving's memorial and the dedication of Pillars of Fulfillment sculpture are also included in the collection. Audio in the collection consists of two radio advertisements for WSU Vancouver for broadcast of KUFO and KKJZ.
